Mr. Allen would have found these things bewildering, but he would have found other things saddening. He owned another house, a very old one, which must have been built a hundred years before, back in the days when Boston was still a village and Muddy River was given out in allotments to its citizens for pasturage. This house, which stood a little farther up Walnut street, on the same side, not far from the present Kennard road, was taken down three years after his death and from its stanch timbers a new one was built, to be the home of the Rev. Cotton Brown, Mr. Allen's successor, who had married his daughter. Before the house was finished, both the Minister and his wife were dead, he a year after her, April 13th, 1751, having had a ministry of only two years and a half. They were both buried in the tomb with Mr. Allen in the old cemetery. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
