At the Chicago Exposition of 1893, hand-cameras were allowed within the grounds on the payment of a fee of $1.00 a day to the official photographer, who issued and sold these daily permits to amateurs. At the St. Louis Fair this summer, the Photographic Concessionaire will have nothing to do with issuing permits for cameras. Up to date all cameras without tripods have been allowed within the grounds without charge. Whether this will continue when the Exposition is open lies with the Division of Concessions and Admission. It is probable that a fee will be charged during the Exposition period, although this has not yet been definitely decided. Hand-cameras may be carried into the fair grounds without charge, the size 4x5 being the limit, and no tripods will be allowed without a permit from the Division of Concessions and Admission. The minor rules regarding the use of cameras have not been definitely set forth as yet. The increasing popularity of carbon printing, and incidentally of the Elliott Carbon Tissues, has necessitated a new edition of the little booklet How to Make Photographs in Fifteen Different Colors by the Carbon Process. This has just been published for free distribution by G. Gennert, 24 East 13th street, and interested readers should secure a copy of this little booklet while it is available. Volume V January, 1904 Number 58 OUTDOOR PORTRAITURE Portraiture in the open air by means of photography is a line of work that..
